By the fourteenth century there was a marked decline in the vitality of medieval institutions. The feudal system was being abandoned as cities developed and trade flourished. The church lost some of its power as people turned their attention to secular pursuits, such as art, science, exploration and the study of classical literature from Ancient Greece. This period is known as the Renaissance – a word that means “rebirth.”

Many people led this movement in various fields, such as art, science and literature. Select ONE (1) of these people and research what they did at this time, as well as how it contributed to the Renaissance (ie. its importance or significance.) Choose one of the following formats to use and hand in:
